MUSIC AFTER THE LITURGY

Con moto maestoso, from Sonata No. 3 in A major Felix Mendelssohn

“When I die I will dance just above the horizon with everything patched and mended where nothing hurts anymore and breasts and legs break through clouds to the beat of thunder and the shine of lightning where blue jays wing pirouettes with sparrows and rainbows ring my wrists and head and dolphins will rise up leaping and somersaulting all around me ocean waves will clap wildly while I bow and the mountains bow and I blow kisses to the earth and give God permission to draw the curtain all the time shouting – “it was good Lord it was good.” Libba Moore Gray
